Corinth Square: A Success and Inspiration

At LANE4, we specialize in identifying shopping centers currently operating below their potential and turning them into staples of their communities. As an example, in 2012 LANE4 completed a redevelopment of the Corinth Square Shopping Center in Prairie Village, Kansas. The overhaul of Corinth included extensive upgrades and enhancements to both the façade and tenant mix. Today, the shopping center is the home of several popular neighborhood-oriented restaurants and businesses and serves as a bustling gathering place for the surrounding communities.

When we examined the neighborhoods in south Kansas City, it was clear that they were long overdue for a destination where community members could shop, dine and socialize in close proximity to their homes. Red Bridge Shopping Center, originally developed by the J.C. Nichols Company, the same visionary developer that created Corinth Square and the Country Club Plaza, was the clear choice for that destination.

We look forward to replicating the success of our Corinth Square renovation, by bringing in exciting, community-oriented restaurants and shops, and embarking on a bold renovation that will preserve and enhance the historic qualities of the center.
